My dear Friar,

I have been away in Birmingham for two or three days, and I only saw your letters when I got home late last night. I have ascertained to-day at the headquarters that it is still open to you to go again to South Africa. I remain of the opinion I have already expressed; but, if you think differently, you had better come home at once and talk it over, as the chance to go out will not remain open longer than a few days.

I am,

Your affectionate father,
